   Developing Public Health Capacity in the EU – Final Report

   The Final Report has been published of a study carried out by a consortium of major European public health organisations to review the capacity of EU Member states to develop and implement public health policies and interventions.

   The project was launched in 2010 by the Executive Agency for Health and Consumers within Second Programme of Community Action in the Field of Health 2008–2013. The European Commission (EAHC and DG SANCO) contracted a consortium of organisations representing the major professional organisations in public health in Europe to review the current public health capacity in Europe and to make recommendations for EU action and support. The Consortium was formed by EuroHealthNet, EUPHA, IUHPE, ASPHER and EHMA, under the leadership of the Department of International Health of Maastricht University and with the support of the WHO European Observatory on Health Systems and Policies and GEOMED.

3. Call for proposals, job opportunities

GNHE Scholarships in Health Equity
The Global Network for Health Equity (GNHE) announces the launch of its Scholarships Program for 2013 – 2014

English: http://bit.ly/ZEEYo6
Español: http://bit.ly/12QBNdU

General objective
The program aims to build capacity in low and middle-income countries for health systems research into issues of health systems equity and universal health coverage, by supporting junior researchers from those countries undertaking research on the following topics in particular:
- Equity in health systems financing and financial protection
- Equity in health systems delivery, including access and utilization
- Equity in health outcomes at the population level
- Universal health coverage

Applications from health economics and all other relevant research fields will be considered as well as inter-disciplinary proposals.

Target group
The program aims to attract post-graduate students (master degree programs or higher) who are interested in carrying out research in the form of an internship at one of the academic institutions affiliated to GNHE in Africa, Asia or Latin America and the Caribbean. In principle, preference will be given to students who are working towards a masters or doctoral thesis and present a proposal approved by their university with support from a faculty advisor at their institution. Each proposal must include a letter of support from the institution where the student is affiliated and/or from the research supervisor. Students are selected on the basis of their topic of study and its relevance to promoting equity in health within and across LMICs. Preference will be given to citizens or permanent-residents of a LMIC in one of the three GNHE regions, but not exclusively.

Application procedure
To be considered for a GNHE scholarship students should send the following documentation to the email addresses provided at the end of this document:
1) Research proposal of no more than 1000 words and a page of bibliography
2) Letter from the student’s faculty advisor or research supervisor confirming the interest of the particular student to undertake the proposed research activity
3) Letter from the student’s University or department of study confirming that no other funding is available for the proposed research activity or that the GNHE scholarship is a necessary complement to other support received.
4) Resume that includes nationality and country of residence, as well as a detailed description of experiences as a student and with research activities in particular
5) If possible, 1 or 2 writing samples (papers and/or other publications)
6) Recommendation by a potential GNHE advisor (desirable; see below)
Students must provide proof that they have no other funding for the proposed research activity or that the GNHE scholarship is a necessary complement to other support received. This should be clarified in the letter of support from the research institution or research mentor.

The scholarship:
1) Provides acceptance to carry out research as an intern for three months at one of the recognized research institutions affiliated to GNHE.
2) Guarantees continuous research support from the GNHE researcher who agrees to take on the student.
3) Provides $5000 US in financial support for the period of time that the student is resident at the host GNHE institution that is expected to cover the costs of airfare, accommodation and all other in-country costs other than office space for the three months of the internship.

The student is expected to conclude the internship with a completed thesis or with at least all data and information collected and analysis completed so that only the writing part is left to finish following departure from the host institution.

The final part of the scholarship -$1000 US (of the total $5000 US) will be paid once the thesis has been submitted, or a paper has been submitted to a refereed journal. Students are also required to share the final version of their thesis with GNHE (for publication on the GNHE website and reference)...."

EUROFOUND
Today the call for tender for the Network of national and EU-level correspondents was published in the Official Journal, and the complete tender pack is now available from our website http://www.eurofound.europa.eu/about/procurement/current/2013/neotender.htm

4. Interesting News

EPODE International Network
This month the EIN is thrilled to welcome three new programmes to the network! Healthy Kids, Bulgaria, Real Food for Real Kids, Canada & Healthy Living, Israel!

Healthy Kids, Bulgaria is implemented in two communities in the capital city of Sofia. This programme promotes healthy lifestyles in primary schools, targeting 7-13 year old children, their parents and teachers, motivating a change in their dietary habits and daily physical activities. As for Lulu Cohen-Farnell, the founder of Real Food for Real Kids, Canada, she and her team work to change the way children eat, understand and perceive food, providing over 8,000 children in childcare centres and schools in the Greater Toronto Area with a daily delivery of fully cooked lunches, prepared snacks, and fresh fruits and vegetables.

Tackling childhood obesity requires a normative cultural change, in which the media is a major player. This is why the Israeli programme, Healthy Living combines both media and field activities reaching approximately 400,000 households and directly involving 600 students respectively!

We are thrilled that our network is growing and look forward to working with these new members in the future. Remember, we need to think global and act local for a healthier generation! More information on EPODE: http://www.epode-european-network.com/

WFPHA - Declaration on Access to Oral Health for Children
The World Federation of Public Health Associations and its Members influence international health policy through the development and implementation of Policy Resolutions and other advocacy initiatives. WFPHA has led the NGO community at Alma Ata in endorsing the concept of primary health care, urged linking health with economic development strategies, raised awareness of the health consequences of landmines and nuclear weapons, engaged as an active NGO participant in the negotiations leading up to the passage of the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, and is committed to providing leadership in efforts to meet the Millennium Development Goals. WFPHA is nowadays actively involved in the Non Communicable Diseases process.
The Association’s key policy making forum is the annual General Assembly of the WFPHA held in Geneva to coincide with the World Health Assembly of the World Health Organization. This effectively determines the timescale for the development and consideration of policy resolutions.
On the 19th May 2013, the WFPHA general assembly passed a resolution from the newly established Oral Health Working Group on access to good for oral health for children. The declaration had been proposed by the Oral Health Working Group (OHWG) and endorsed by the WFPHA policy committee.

Declaration on Access to Oral Health for Children
Every child has a right to good oral health. Oral health problems in children can impact on many aspects of their general health and development, causing substantial pain and disruption to their lives and often altering their behaviour. Oral health is an integral part of overall well-being and essential for eating, growth, speech, social development, learning capacity and quality of life.
To promote oral health every child should have access to:

• Oral health education including oral hygiene instructions and dietary advice, and access to affordable toothbrushes and toothpaste containing fluoride as soon as the first primary tooth erupts
• Preventive interventions, appropriate to the infrastructure and priorities of the country, which may include dental sealants, community fluoridation, and regular fluoride varnish applications
• Treatment of early stage decay to stop it from progressing to cavities, and treatment of dental cavities, acute pain and other oral diseases
• Environments that eliminate advertising of unhealthy foods to children.

Through good oral health all children will have an equal opportunity to thrive and reach their full potential for a promising future.

eHealth Cooperation
DG CONNECT and ONC are pleased to announce the launch of a joint new initiative – the EU-US MoU and Roadmap for eHealth Cooperation. This initiative, under the auspices of the Transatlantic Economic Council (TEC), will address the need for international interoperability of health records and the need to improve the ehealth skills of the current workforce. On behalf of the European Commission's DG CONNECT and the ONC Standards and Interoperability Framework, we are pleased to invite your valued participation in the kick-off of the eHealth Cooperation Initiative.
There is an ever-growing demand and need for patients to access their own health data through mobile devices and personal computers. This access provides patients with the ability to track their medical histories throughout their lives no matter where they live, or where they move. Physicians also need access to this data for the purpose of remote consultation or patient care outside a patient’s home country or state. Global progress is being made in defining standards for semantic interoperability, syntactic interoperability and patient mediated exchange that will eventually allow for the easy sharing of data between countries. However, many different coding, classification and messaging standards are currently in use, hindering the ability of individual countries to exchange data. It is the intent of this initiative to obtain and aggregate input from stakeholders around the world toward the establishment of agreed upon methods and standards for international interoperability of health records.

The demand for ehealth expertise in the workplace is growing daily. Many ehealth jobs are vacant due to lack of training, expertise and accreditation. Agreeing on standards and methods will help define what skills, expertise and credentials qualify someone as a health informatics professional. It is the intent of this new initiative to seek input from academicians, industry, professional societies and other stakeholders to define and establish these standards and methods.

Details on the eHealth Cooperation launch including web meeting access, call in information, proposed agenda, reference materials and the Project Charter are posted on the eHealth Cooperation wiki page. If you would like to participate in the eHealth Cooperation Initiative, please review the documentation on the S&I Framework wiki: http://wiki.siframework.org/Getting+Started+as+a+Volunteer

Once you have read through the material regarding participation, levels of commitment, guidelines for participation and voting rights, please sign up to participate in the eHealth Cooperation Initiative by completing the registration form on the eHealth Cooperation Sign Up Wiki Page.

Your perspectives, expertise and experiences are critical to the success of this initiative and we look forward to your participation in the eHealth Cooperation Initiative.

Press Release Robert Koch Institute (RKI)

Positive signals and warning signs – 34 articles with results of the “German Health Interview and Examination Survey for Adults” published.

The majority of Germans feel healthy: their self-rated health has improved, particularly among the elderly. Tests on functional capabilities in old age show: restrictions in everyday life affect only a minority of senior citizens. There is a general trend towards more sports activities. One-fourth of adults practise sports for at least two hours a week on a regular basis. These are only some of the results of the first wave of the “German Health Interview and Examination Survey for Adults” (DEGS1) conducted by the Robert Koch Institute. The results of DEGS1 have just been published with 34 articles in the Bundesgesundheitsblatt (May/June 2013). The DEGS1 results include both positive signals and warning signs and constitute an important basis for evidence-based prevention strategies.

The articles from the Bundesgesundheitsblatt are available in PDF format at http://www.rki.de/EN/Home/homepage_node.html and Moreover, photos, video footage, a summary, an abstract collection, a key issues paper and other information on DEGS1 are available on http://www.degs-studie.de/english/

Successes and failures of health policy in Europe. Four decades of divergent trends and converging challenges
Edited by Johan Mackenbach and Martin McKee
In the last 40 years, the health of Europeans overall has improved markedly, yet progress has been very uneven from country to country. This report considers the impact health policy has had on population health. It asks questions about mortality trends and health policy activity, such as:
- Do differences in rates of disease reflect differences in related policies?
- What would a country gain if it implemented the policies of the best performing country?
- Which social, economic and political factors influence a country's success in health policy?

By offering a comparative analysis of the successes and failures of health policy in most of the countries of the WHO European Region, it helps readers identify best practices for health improvement in the following areas: tobacco; alcohol; food and nutrition; fertility, pregnancy and childbirth; child health; infectious diseases; hypertension; cancer screening; mental health; road traffic injuries; and air pollution.
Written by experts and based on the latest evidence-based research, this volume is a must for policy-makers and those working in health care as professionals, researchers and students.

Status report on alcohol and health in 35 European countries 2013
People in the WHO European Region consume the most alcohol per head in the world. In the European Union (EU), alcohol accounts for about 120 000 premature deaths per year: 1 in 7 in men and 1 in 13 in women. Most countries in the Region have adopted policies, strategies and plans to reduce alcohol-related harm. In 2012, the WHO Regional Office for Europe collected information on alcohol consumption and related harm, and countries policy responses to contribute to the Global Information System for Alcohol and Health; this report presented a selection of the results for 35 countries – EU Member States and candidate countries, Norway and Switzerland – individually and in groups distinguished by their drinking patterns and traditions.

Urban health observatories: A possible solution to filling a gap in public health intelligence
Why consider a local public health observatory for your city or region?
Policy Brief
The World Health Organization (WHO) and United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-HABITAT) exposed the extent to which certain city dwellers disproportionately suffer from a wide range of diseases and health conditions[1] (Box 1). Such inequities exist in cities all over the world. They are a manifestation of differential social and living conditions, often resulting from unplanned urbanization, which can undermine progress in health development.
