

An independent scientific and professional voice for public health in Europe

PRESS RELEASE

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

On 26th February 2014 the European Parliament voted overwhelmingly in favour of the Tobacco Products Directive. The European Public Health Association (EUPHA) welcomes this vote as an important step towards the achievement of a Tobacco Free Europe. However, it recognises that there is still much to be done and we encourage Member States to go even further, implementing additional measures known to be effective in reducing smoking, and especially standardised packaging.

EUPHA also calls for lessons to be learnt from this process. While we have been waiting for this Directive to complete its unusually prolonged passage into law, the tobacco industry has been able to recruit thousands of Europe's children, many of whom will die prematurely as a result. This delay is, in large part, due to the actions of powerful vested interests, employing vast lobbying resources. Their success in delaying this process has raised serious concerns about the transparency of the European Union's institutions, with implications for the European ideal. Europe's public health community has a duty to speak out where the health of our populations is threatened. We see our call for greater transparency about the activities of the tobacco lobby as reflecting this duty.

Note to editors:

The European Public Health Association, or EUPHA in short, is an umbrella organisation for public health associations and institutes in Europe. EUPHA was founded in 1992 by 15 members (12 countries). EUPHA now has 68 members from 40 countries:

- 39 national associations of public health
- 18 institutional members
- 8 European NGOs
- 3 individual members.

EUPHA is an international, multidisciplinary, scientific organisation, bringing together around 14'000 public health experts for professional exchange and collaboration throughout Europe. We encourage a multidisciplinary approach to public health. Our vision is of improved health and reduced health inequalities for all Europeans. We seek to support our members to increase the impact of public health in Europe, adding value to the efforts of regions and states, national and international organisations, and individual public health experts.
